Red flags when dealing with contractors

Hiring a Swimming Pool Contractor

Frequently Asked Questions

What are the signs of a potentially unscrupulous swimming pool contractor?

Warning signs include lack of proper licensing and insurance, inability to provide references, asking for full payment upfront, pressuring you into quick decisions, or providing vague or incomplete contracts.

How important is it for a swimming pool contractor to have proper licensing and insurance?

Extremely important. Proper licensing ensures that they meet industry standards and regulations while insurance protects you from any liabilities in case of accidents or damages during construction.

Should I be concerned if a swimming pool contractor asks for full payment up front?

Yes, its a common red flag. A reputable contractor will usually require a deposit upon signing the contract but never the full amount before work has begun.

What should I do if my swimming pool contractor provides an unclear or incomplete contract?

Do not sign it. A good contract should clearly outline details such as project timeline, materials to be used, total cost and payment schedule. If these details are missing or vague, ask for them to be included before signing anything.
